EASTERN DATES TO MAY 23.

EASTERN STATES.

Annexation Rumor Denied.

NEW YORK, May 22.—The World's Washington special authoritatively denies the statement of the Alta California that a special commissioner was recently in San Francisco on his way to the Sandwich Islands on behalf of this Government to inaugurate the preliminary steps for the annexation of the Islands to the United States, and adds: "It is hardly probable that any special commissioner would furnish a detailed account of the subject of the mission. Information in possession of the Government, from recent visitors to the Sandwich Islands, does not indicate any desire for annexation to the United States on the part of the inhabitants, nor is there any apparent intention on the part of the Administration in that direction."

Woman Suffrage on Trial.

ROCHESTER, May 22.—The cases of Susan B. Anthony and fourteen other women voters in this city, and the inspectors of election indicted for receiving and counting votes of women, came up to-day in the United States District Court. All indictments were ordered to be tried at the June term of the Circuit Court, and defendants were released on their own recognizance. The tax-paying women of Rochester held a second meeting to day, preparatory to organizing for resistance against taxation without representation.

Another Accident from Careless ness.

SHAMOKIN (Pa.), May 22.—During the ceremonies of laying the corner stone of the new Catholic Church in this city this afternoon, a portion of the temporary building, which was erected for the accommodation of the vast multitude assembled, gave way, and precipitated a large number of persons into the basement. It is impossible at this time to give the names and number of the injured, but it is supposed six are seriously hurt. Bishop Wood, of Philadelphia, Father Dollard, and Father Brady, who were conducting the ceremonies at the time of the accident, assisted by 20 clergymen, were among those who went down with the falling floor but they luckily escaped serious injury.

The "Code" Still Operative.

PETERSBURG, Va., May 22.—A bloody duel took place this evening between two well known young bloods, which resulted in one of them being fatally wounded. The weapons used were double-barreled shot guns, distance ten paces. A love scrape was the cause of the duel

Congressmen on a "Rust."

NEW ORLEANS, May 22.—The Congressional excursionists arrived here at 4 P. M., and were escorted to the City Hall and welcomed by Mayor Wiltz. They are to have a reception at the St. Charles Hotel this evening, and will leave in the morning by steamer for the mouth of the river.

Terrific Tornado in Iowa.

WASHINGTON, Iowa, May 23.—A terrific tornado, accompanied with hail, passed over this county, six miles north of here, yesterday afternoon. It came from the southwest and passed out of this county a little east of Yetton. The tornado was about half a mile in width. It tore into fragments everything that came in its course. Houses, barns, fences, trees, cattle, and human beings, were caught up and whirled through the air like mere toys, or dashed to the ground with such violence as to cause instant death. For miles around the fields are dotted with large timbers driven into the ground at an angle of 90 degrees. Cattle were actually driven head foremost into the ground. One can scarcely conceive the amount of devastation or the violence of the tornado. We have already heard of 13 farm houses and many barns literally torn to pieces, and many others are badly damaged. A school house miles south of here was torn to pieces. The daughter of Henry Rathmel, aged 14 years, was carried about a quarter of a mile from the school house, dashed to the ground and crushed to a jelly. Miss Smith, a teacher, and six or eight scholars, were hurt very badly. Mary Walters was killed, and Miss Gibson and the son of Alex. Gibson lie at the point of death, from injuries received.

Gentlemen who saw the tornado when it passed reports it balloon shaped, with the small end to the ground, and that it moved at the rate of about 20 miles an hour. It commenced its career near Keokuk, where it demolished several houses. About six miles northeast it destroyed two or three houses, and passing on northward it scattered to the four winds fragments and barns of Alex. Gibson, James Babcock and J. C. Cunningham. It also leveled to the ground the dwellings of E. H. Waters, Mr. Hermsinger and Mr. Kerr. Many lives were saved by hastily getting into cellars. A lad above was carried in all kinds of debris. From an eye witness description it is almost a miracle that anything in its track escaped alive. The people could see large pieces of timber hurled as though shot from a cannon. Hail still nine inches in diameter. Some was brought to this city, and four hours after they had been picked up were still as large as a hen's egg. The roaring of the tornado was fearful and could have been heard easily ten miles. At this place and six miles away it was perfectly appalling, surpassing anything we ever heard except the roar of battle.

A telegram from Keokuk last evening says that three persons were killed three miles from that place, and one child torn to pieces.

Our reports are only from a few points on the line of the hurricane. We cannot estimate the amount of damage, but it must be many thousand dollars. Many more lives were probably lost than are reported, and no estimate can be made on the stock killed.

The Polaris Disaster.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Judge Chas. C Daley, President of the Geographical Society, speaking of the death of Capt. Hall, says that the one who started the poisoning story on the supposition of a complicity by an Esquimaux would not have done so had he known the breed. They don't know what truth means. Joe is spoken of as a well-meaning man, but Hans is a man of bad reputation. He was near being hanged by Dr Hayes on one of his expeditions; Judge Daley is not inclined to accept as true the stories told of Capt. Buddington by those rescued, and alludes to circumstances showing that Tyson and Myers were the men reported as showing insubordination. He says Hall was not capable of leading such an expedition. He did not care so much that the North Pole should be reached as that he should reach it. He was not a seaman; an attempt to induce him to leave the command by Lieut. Greinnell, son of his benefactor, failed.

Mr. Grinnell, when spoken to on the subject, said Capt. Hall lacked one requisite for the task he undertook: to govern the men. He was too familiar with his crew.

John Hegman, who furnished the expedition with a portion of its outfit, is made to say by an interview, that Hall expressed himself confident that Buddington, Chester and Morton would sustain him in any discipline he should attempt to enforce, that Hegman, in his daily visits to the Polaris when at New York, did not favorably impress and by others. He regards him as a very disagreeable man, one whom it would be difficult to manage. In his opinion, the party that returned are deserters.

WEST INDIES.

HAVANA, May 22.—The arrest of Price, correspondent of the New York Herald, and the refusal to allow his counsel and friends to communicate with him, have revived the question of the power of the Government to try foreigners according to Spanish law, by which the testimony of witnesses and prisoners is taken by the Judge without publicity, and prisoners are compelled to answer written interrogations without knowing the charges against them, or who are their accusers. It is reported that a court-martial is to be convened in Cuba to try O'Kelly.

BY ATLANTIC CABLE.

Illness of Pius IX.

LONDON, May 22.—The Lancet publishes a detailed statement of the malady of the Pope, which, it says, is worse than has been officially stated.

Crisis in the Assembly at Paris.

PARIS, May 22.—The debate to take place in the National Assembly to morrow absorbs the attention of all classes. The Left has resolved to support the simple order of the day against any interpellation of the Right Center. A full attendance of deputies is expected, and it is probable that upwards of 700 votes will be cast. All factions of the Assembly will meet in the morning previous to the commencement of the debate in the Chamber to prepare for the discussion. There are apprehensions of a disturbance, and precautions have been taken by the military authorities for the suppression of any disorderly demonstration.

The Soir believes it is the existence of the Government and not of the Cabinet, which is staked on the vote to-morrow.

It is reported that a conspiracy to kill Thiers has been discovered. The concocter of the plot is said to be a madman.

Spanish Affairs.

BARCELONA, May 21.—General Valdez has issued a proclamation calling all males between fourteen and sixty into the Republican columns and threatening to inflict heavy penalties upon all municipalities attempting to thwart its operations.

NEVADA.

RENO, May 23.—The verdict of the coroner's jury summoned to inquire into the cause of the death of Wright and Sanbourne, was that they were murdered by some person or persons unknown to the jury.

Cherry Creek is now the center of interest among prospectors. The recent rich discoveries of silver there cause no little excitement. Stampeders are moving that way constantly.

We were visited this morning by a heavy snow storm.

VALLEJO, May 23.—Hon. A. A. Sargent and the British consul, from San Francisco, arrived at the Mare Island Navy Yard this morning. A salute was fired on their arrival. They are guests of Admiral Selfridge.

A Python of a Yarn.

ELKO, May 23.—Parties arrived from Spruce mountain this morning bring the following intelligence: Night before last the watchman of the smelting works saw an Indian stealing tools. As soon as the red-skin made his exit the watchman followed him. After following him nearly half a mile, he came upon his camp in a secluded spot in the mountains. The Indians, numbering seventy-five, had a large fire, and were seated in a circle. One, supposed to be the chief, was addressing the rest, and brandishing a revolver and knife in a hideous manner. The watchman became alarmed, returned to town in great haste, and got others to accompany him to the scene of the dance. On their return they found another Indian speaking. On closer observation they discovered the Indians were Goth Utes, from the vicinity of Salt Lake. They number fifty-one warriors, every buck having a gun, and many of them armed with a gun and revolver. Several Shoshones were seen participating in the dance, one of whom spoke at some length. The appearance of the strange band of Goth Utes, who had never been seen in that section, together with the visit of the warriors from the Fort Hall reservation, was the cause for general alarm. On returning to town a guard was at once organized, but it was ascertained that the Indians had purchased all the powder in town a few days previous, and they had neither arms nor ammunition to defend themselves with. A party was dispatched to Camp Halleck (reaching there yesterday,) to procure arms and ammunition, but were refused both by the commander of the post. The Indians grow more insulting daily. Judge Fack, of this place, received a petition from one of the grand jurors residing there stating that an outbreak was looked for at any moment; that there were women and children depending on the men for protection, and asking to be armed. The petition was signed by all the leading men of the town. Should an attack be made on the town the struggle will be desperate. There are but nine available soldiers now stationed at Camp Halleck, the regular garrison being in the Modoc country. If the Indians commence hostilities, as in all probability they will, settlers in this section will all be massacred before Government assistance can reach them.

WYOMING.

Not Wanted.

FORT SANDERS, May 22.—Two companies of the Fourth Infantry, which arrived here a few days ago from Little Rock, Ark., en route to the scene of the Modoc troubles, have received orders from Washington to remain at this post.

From San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 23.—Henry Baker was alive this morning. A morning council of surgeons was called to consider the necessity of trepanning. The pulse was regular and hemorrhage had stopped. There are slight hopes that he may live, if the pressure upon the brain can be relieved.

Capt. Hare, master of the British steamer Alliance, has been arrested for carrying too many passengers. His bail is fixed at $9,000.

The General Jay Still Operative.

FAIRCHILD'S RANCH, May 20—4 P. M.—While Gen. Davis, Inspector General Hardie, Col. Green, Col. Sumner, Col. Gillem, Col. Hertt, Lieutenants Rockwell and Adams, and escort, were en route to Van Bremer's, having left the lava bed, about 10 o'clock in the morning, a courier interrupted the procession by the delivery of a dispatch to Gen. Davis. The Warm Spring scouts in advance were recalled and the programme instantly changed. Gen. Davis determined upon Fairchild's ranch instead of Van Bremer's for his future headquarters. The train then halted 23 miles northwest of the lava bed. It was famous at the inception of the Modoc troubles. It is likely to become an important feature in future developments. The accounts of Hasbrouck's scout, previously forwarded, were gleaned by myself from that gallant officer's subordinate, who came into the Tule Lake camp as a courier. At this ranch to-day, I was present during an interview between Gen. Davis and Hasbrouck, and learned additional particulars. Hasbrouck left Boyle's camp on the 7th of May and has been scouting more or less ever since; some times on horseback and again on foot. His command consisted of light battery B of the Fourth Artillary, troops B and G, of the First Cavalry, and the Warm Spring Indians, in all 210 men. Captain Jackson had charge of companies B and G. The Captain has followed the instructions of General Davis implicitly. He harrassed Indians as soon as found. His men fought well in every instance. They paid little heed to hunger and exposure, and while the troops in camp were huddling about fires and throwing epithets at the weather, the soldiers on this long scout were sleeping in the open air. They lived on hard tack and beans, and were restricted to a quart of water per day, and on one occasion they were 24 hours without food; but the work in hand was accomplished successfully. The Indians were vanquished. Captain Hasbrouck specially praises the gallantry of B troop, and that portion of G in the charge of Dry Lake. The men scaled a ridge 20 feet high in the face of the Modocs, and drove them away. Capt. Jackson led the right, Lieut. Moss the left, and Lieutenants Bontelle and Kyle held other bold positions. Captain Hasbrouck has not lost a man since the Dry Lake engagement.

The Captive Modocs Interviewed.

Artena Chokas (Long Tom) and One-eyed Dixie, two Modoc strongs, arrived at this point last evening, interviewed the five women captured by Captain Hasbrouck's command, and from this gleaned interesting accounts of Modoc operations during the last few months. The captives proved to be Mrs. Washmetel, Bogus Charley's two sisters, the mother of black Jim, and one widow whose relatives have attained no notable social distinction. They arrived last Shack-nasty Frank, Shack-nasty Jake, Shacknasty Bill, Steamboat Frank, (Ellen's man,) Hooka Jim's father, Boston, Nigh and several other Modocs have been killed and many wounded. One big-headed Jack carried an ounce ball in his body for several days, and when it arrived was apparently booked for the happy hunting grounds. The inability of Little John to travel at a rapid pace delayed the band.

Hasbrouck encountered and got the Modocs into this last difficulty.

The excuse for the dissatisfaction among the Modocs after the battle, is as novel as it is interesting: The redoubtable Jack, better known as "Captain," had executed a stolen chrono mix, and after sundry gestures and excitations, promised his followers that they should shell rifle bullets as duck shot, and become unharmed. The confusion this statement inspired was rudely dissipated by the Hasbrouck encounter when several Modocs were killed and others wounded. Indignation then relegated supreme in Jack's household. The Cottonwood branch of the tribe from Fairchild's decided to fight no more. This resolution led to Jack's clandestine departure with the finest specimens of ponies in the aboriginal cleft and the finest steeds in the stable. After Jack's departure these Cottonwoods, numbering about twenty warriors and fifty women and children, huddled to the snow mountains at the southern end of the lava deposit, as they say preparatory to traveling to the Yainax reservation and imploring the pardon of the Great Father at Washington. The sudden and unexpected advent of Hasbrouck's cavalry and the Warm Spring Indians disturbed their peaceful meditations and caused them to run and fight.

During the stampede Mrs. Hendricks (Queen Lizzy), threw her babe of six months to the ground, in the hope of escaping, and was soon after killed by the Warm Spring Indians. She might have escaped by throwing up her arms, in token of surrender, but she would not yield. The babe was brought here and turned over to a lovely squaw, and, judging from its tone of voice, the wee thing has inherited the proud spirit of its mother. The babe is in the next room. Artena also learned from the Modoc women that the Cottonwoods earnestly desired any action looking to peace, and would yield to the soldiers if opportunity offered.

About this time the gentle Warm Springs outside the interviewing apartment commenced singing one of their national melodies, and drawing bright knives across their throat connexion, which caused an uneasiness among the Modocs and terminated the consultation.

Capt. Hasbrouck said he was willing to have the Modocs surrender, and would offer them every facility for so doing. The tried and true Artena Chokas and Dixie, who have hitherto been of great service to the Government, sought the idea immediately, and wanted to be employed as emissaries. They were provided with horses and provisions for two days and sent after the Modocs. Early this morning they started on their mission of mercy. The results thus far achieved are in a great measure attributable to the conduct of Gen. Davis. He found officers and men disheartened by the terrible reverses. Demoralization had really commenced. The officers had lost none of their bravery, but they thought the men would run away from any crisis. The men wanted more light on the lava bed warfare before making another sortie. Gen. Davis improved the fighting tone of his force and then sent out his expeditions with orders to find, fight, and follow.

Second Dispatch.

MAY 21, 6 A. M.—In the course of a conversation with Inspector General Hardie, who has just returned from the Klamath Reservation, I have learned that there is no disposition on the part of the Indians of that locality to join the Modocs, except some few of the young men. The hoodlum warriors of the reservation might have been induced to enlist under Jack had his war continued to be a success, but his defeat has dampened their ardor. No trouble is now anticipated. It was feared at one time that the Modocs would slip into the Yainax Agency and incite the young bucks to mischief, but these fears will soon be allayed. Ere this news reaches San Francisco, the news of Jack's defeat will have been generally disseminated among the Indians of Northern California and Southern Oregon. The noble red man has no sympathy for friends in distress. No outside Indians will join Jack, hence the reservation people may hereafter take their coffee in peace, and quietly declare dividends.

Third Dispatch.

FAIRCHILD'S RANCH, May 21, 8 A. M.—The latest order locates the headquarters of the expedition at Van Bremer's, where the Infantry went yesterday. Gen. Davis remains here for the present.

The result of the mission to the Modocs in the hills, undertaken by Dixie and Artena Chokas, is awaited with anxiety. Thus far nothing has been heard of the women.

Fourth Dispatch.

FAIRCHILD'S RANCH, May 22—10 P. M.—Artena Chokas and One-eyed Dixie returned here at dusk this evening, from the direction of Dorris' ranch, and seemed thoroughly exhausted, judging from the avidity with which they surrounded a couple of beefsteaks. Mr. Fairchild, the gentleman who has cleverly engineered this consultation business, judged the Modocs must be at least fifteen miles away. Both of the women said in substance that they had traveled a long distance. At 8 o'clock the women were taken to Gen. Davis' tent, and in the presence of that officer, Gen. Hardie, Col. Gillem, Capt. Hasbrouck, Mr. Fairchild and the writer, were delicately interrogated, Mr. Fairchild doing the interpreting. True to the nature of their sex, the women talked a long while and said but little. They avoided the main issue and wanted to speak of trees, ravines, rocks, the weather, etc. At last they settled down to business and began the story.

Artena said the Indians were 15 miles from here, and there were 15 warriors and 50 squaws and children. The Great Spirit had caused Modoc hearts to feel for the white people. They all wanted to come in to the fold, and live in peace among the whites, but in the present condition of affairs they dared not for their lives. Fear alone prevented them from appearing within range of their guns. They wanted a parley. Let them go to where Gen. Davis was camped, meeting General Davis, who was not to come and talk over matters. The talk might be held between both parties midway between the camps. No Modoc could approach without a peace talk. Dixie smoked with the white chief of Artena. General Davis now invited many of his officers, on account of the appearance of the squaws, up from the camp of the Modocs' fighting strength. The poor women evidently intended to act as mere dummies and say nothing more. They have not consorted with the bucks' band since the Cantby massacre, but have talked to often aided the troops. Mr. Fairchild says they are about as truthful as Modoc squaws generally get to be. By no means a doubtful compliment.

The interview lasted one and three-quarters of an hour. At its close Gen. Davis told Artena and Dixie to go to the Modoc camp to-morrow morning, and tell the Indians he should not go out for a new talk, as he did not like to see his braves fall away from him. The Indians must come to him if they wanted to talk. He would allow them to surrender. They had until Friday morning to appear at his headquarters. After the talk he should shoot every Modoc who was found with a gun in his hand. The two women then retired. At the interview they told Mr. Fairchild that they should not return to the Modoc camp. That question will be determined in the morning.

Col. Perry has arrived here with his cavalry. It has been cloudy during the day, and this evening is now falling.

BOYLE'S CAMP (on the Lava bed), May 21.—10 A. M. Nothing new has transpired since the arrival of the pets named in the south end of Tule Lake. All the wounded, save the Warm Spring scout, who has a ball in the arm, are doing well. The latter will die sure, as he has a bullet hole through the lung.

No sign of Modoc save him who has a hole in his head.

LAVA BED, May 21, Noon.—Col. Perry's cavalry command returned to Boyle's camp early this morning after a five days' [illegible] for the Modocs, [illegible] attributable to any delinquency on the part of the command.

Dr. Semig is improving rapidly.

VAN BREMER'S, May 21, 2 P. M.—The cavalry arrived here this evening and went into camp on Willow Creek.

FAIRCHILD'S RANCH, May 22, 8 A. M.—Gen. Hardie, Col. Gillem and Mr. Fairchild leave for Yreka to-day. The latter is going to Sun Free [illegible].

FAIRCHILD'S RANCH, May 22, 9 A. M.—The Modoc women say that the band divided into two parties only, the Dry Lake fight, and that most of the warriors are in the second [illegible] from here. The women left Boyle's camp to the fugitives with Gen. Davis' message saying that the latter would be instrumental in bringing them back by kindness. The result of his efforts is problematic.

LATER.—Artena Chokas and One-eye Dixie have declined to carry Gen. Davis' message to the Modocs.

YREKA, May 23.—Fr. J. H. McCoy, who has just come in from Fairchild's in eight hours and fifty minutes, we learn that the Hot Creek band—each [illegible] by Fairchild's party, and subsequently to Gen. Davis, apparently unarmed and unattended by guard. They gave up their arms, guard and all, under guard. The band numbered fifty-five men, women and children, including about seventeen warriors; among the number Bogus Charley, Shacknasty Jim, Curly-headed Doctor, Frank and others, the best fighting men. Capt. Jack had fled to the Klamath and Hooka Jim is hunting him.

It is supposed that there are twenty warriors with Capt. Jack, whose whereabouts is unknown, though he is [illegible] that he is in the Lava bed, on the river mouth.

Gen. Gillem has superseded by Gen. Wheaton. Gen. Hardie, Gen. Gillem, Capt. Rockw

SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 25, 1873

About Setting up Things.

The Bulletin has found the "bear's nest" at last. It says that H. Y. Thompson, Esq., Dr. Bowlby, Prosecuting Attorney Durham "and others" have on different occasions within the period of "several weeks" sat down together and discussed the political situation. From this ominous fact the Bulletin concludes these men are running the movement for conducting the city election without reference to politics. In other words these three or four persons have got control of one-third or more of the voters of the city including nearly all the business men of prominence, merchants, mechanics, laborers, bankers, speculators and all, and caused them to go into a movement of this nature, and append their names to the call that initiated the movement. And they have not only exercised this extraordinary power, but they have also induced the Committee of Twenty-seven, composed of men of the highest business standing and unblemished personal character, after due and timely warning from the Bulletin, to rush, enter heartily into the movement, and advertise officially, in all the daily papers of the city, the Bulletin included, that they intended to do their best endeavors to make the movement a success. And to this it may be added, that the movement appears to meet with almost universal approbation. These three or four persons must possess a tremendous power in this community.

But let us return to the meeting question. Have not you got things a little mixed, Mr. Bulletin? Have not you compared your own observations with those of the citizens? We have been aware of a number of meetings held in the interest of the Custom House ring, at which H. W. Scott, O. N. Denny, and a few others, including some prominent Democrats of this city, were present, and at which meetings the situation was discussed, the desperate state of the ring canvassed, and all sorts of things done to see if combinations could not be formed with some of the effete Democracy made. Most of these meetings were held at the house of Ben. Holladay, till the played-out patron of the ring became so notorious over city politics and his name so much a by-word and a reproach that injunctions were unavailing to quash this meeting. Then he folded his tent like any other Arab, and silently stole away to Mr. Clat-op Jo-ephine. Since that time (and in a few instances before) the meetings of the ring have been held sometimes at the office of Mr. Holladay's attorney, and sometimes at the offices of O. N. Denny, Police Judge, where fuel and lights did not cost anything extra to the tax-payers. It was at one of these meetings that Hon. J. B. Congle was persuaded by the Mayoralty, and it was here that the first step was taken. It was done (this was at the time of the election), that it was not and decided to-day, and induced Colonel McCraken to become the ring candidate for Mayor in place of Mr. Farrens so cavalierly pushed away from his proposed honors. It was in these meetings that Mr. Lotan, Esq., has been made the candidate for Councilman from the Second Ward. It is in these meetings that many of the heads of city and ward offices have been made up by half a dozen or so of the Custom House worshipers, who call themselves Republicans, and by about half as many prominent Democrats, and which ticket it is intended shall be forced upon the people, by means of the old and well-known tricks, trickery, bribery and illegal and improper voters at the primaries.

What part have the people in this ring performance? Not the least in the world. Everything is "cut and dried" by a baker's dozen of political hucksters, and schemes are devised to hoodwink the community into the support of the ring's nominees. It is a consolation, however, to see that the baker's dozen of the ring and their democratic allies have not been able to secure the confidence of the people; and instead of producing a movement in which the citizens take a lively interest they crowd on the corners with their same little act for day to day, downcast, disgusted, helpless and whining. The doom of the Multnomah ring is sealed. The handwriting is on the wall.

The [illegible] thing by half that we have [illegible] in this or any other community to [illegible] a public of respectable standing, took place in this city, on Wednesday last. A [illegible] front individual, who holds a high office in the State, a member of the Custom House ring, entered the store of one of the most esteemed citizens of Portland, as we are informed, and seized the latter, if [illegible], which had just been published as one of the signatures to the call for the Committee of Twenty-seven, was placed upon the table by himself. The merchant replied that [illegible] sent my bill," said the public [illegible]; "I don't want anything more to do with a Republican who would sign that paper." The merchant gave him to understand that his patronage was fully appreciated, and the desire to discontinue their relations had suddenly become mutual. Such narrow-minded bigotry might comport with the character of the Duke of Alva, or Catharine de Medici; but it can only excite pity and disgust when it is found in an American citizen in the year of our Lord 1873. We recollect but few instances of anything akin to this transaction, and that was the sending a note to a member of the Legislature threatening him with the application of lynch law in case he voted in the way it was supposed he would vote upon a stated proposition.

This year is the ring candidate for Governor. They have "cut and dried" the politics of the State as far ahead as that already. He is to be forced upon the people a year from this time by exactly the same means that were used a year ago to force Mr. Mitchell upon us. What for a Governor would such a man make?

The Herald says three-fourths of the signers to the call for the citizens' nominating committee are Republicans, and the Bulletin declares the majority of them are Democrats. Between these two oracles it is to be hoped the utterly unimportant question may be settled in a satisfactory manner. We venture to suggest whether this is not a proper case for the application of the differential calculus. A matter so momentous that nobody cares a fig about it, certainly ought to be defined with mathematical accuracy.

An Indianapolis dispatch says that a meeting was held in that city on the 19th inst., to take preliminary steps toward preparations for the funeral of General Canby. A memorial address was adopted paying a touching tribute to the great and noble qualities of the deceased. General Sherman and other distinguished officers are expected to attend the funeral.

The Beginning of the End.

Our morning dispatches state that the soldiers and the Warm Spring scouts at the Modoc front (or rear) rejoice at the prospect of a speedy peace. They have no particular reason to rejoice, unless it be in excess of patriotic gladness that a burden of taxation will be lifted from the people by their withdrawal from the lava bed. For the reason of the surrender of Bogus Charley and his band of murderers, is now apparent. their horses are lean, and their provisions are exhausted. Perhaps the soldiers feel elated at their victory. There has been a grave oversight somewhere. The dispatches speak of "Captain Jack's defeat." When did that event occur, pray? Perhaps our reporter in Yreka has forgotten to mention so unimportant a matter.

It now becomes a matter of serious inquiry as to what course will be pursued towards these murderous wretches who have surrendered. It will be remembered that, in the heat of indignation at the ruthless murder of his superior, General Gillem telegraphed Schofield that "not an Indian should be left to boast that he or his ancestors killed the Commissioners." That sounded well. But now they have the Modocs, General Gillem has been superseded—and in a manner rendered powerless to execute his threat—and now, in the language of a notorious American, "What are they going to do about it?"

We have examined with some care the plan of a Capitol building for our State prepared by Mr. Augustus Laver, Architect of San Francisco, who came to Oregon to submit it to the Capitol Commissioners. Mr. Laver came here on the last steamer, but by reason of head winds at sea the vessel failed to arrive on regular time and he was a few hours too late for competition before the Board. We did not know anything in reference to the plans adopted, and can not say but they are as good as Mr. Laver's or better; but we do know the latter to be very beautiful and appropriate, and such as would impart to the building a distinct character and individuality very desirable in such edifices. As we all desire that the Capitol may be constructed after the best plan possible, we can not but wish this one had arrived in time to be considered by the Commissioners, and if it is not too late, we venture the suggestion, though without intending to reflect upon the architects, whose plan was adopted, that the interests and wishes of the whole State might be promoted by the Commissioners' consulting with Mr. Laver in connection with their other architects. Their is wisdom in the multitude of counsel, and we are informed Mr. Laver has had large experience in this class of architecture.

Lizzie Marchbot is in some respects a remarkable young woman, as the vigor of her muscular functions so forcibly lavished on George Lawis, well attest. In the brief space of eleven minutes and some unconsidered seconds, there was consumed on the yielding form of G. L., some eighteen inches of stout whalebone. This interesting performance was varied by frequent verbose interjections, after this style: "You are an arch-traitor, a villain, and a liar," &c., "You have a superfluous and superabilious amount of egotistical self-conceit." The cause of the difficulty originated in an unfortunate remark of this Lawless young man, expressed by this matchless young woman in her brief exordium: "George, you have defamed my character." And when he attempted to escape, she detained him with the choosing assurance that "he could't get away from her like that." Finally, when her sensitive honor had been avenged, she thrust him aside, remarking, tragically, "I have accomplished my purpose and I am satisfied." That young woman will distinguish herself some day.

Mr. Holladay's paper has intimated on several occasions that the nominating committee of citizens are in a corrupt league with the Water Company. Such an imputation is palpably and grossly false. If the Water Company were disposed to attempt to resort to bribery in order to secure the popular endorsement of their measure a thing we do not wish to impute to them—they would know better than to approach any of the gentlemen on that committee. We do not know what sort of nominations these gentlemen will make for city officers, but they are too highminded to be corrupted, and too intelligent to be easily deceived. We shall be greatly obliged to any person who will point out the instance in which the ordinary machinery of party primaries has resulted in securing a city convention equal to this committee in the character of its members.

An exchange gives some interesting figures on railway matters. There are at present 130,000 miles of railway on the globe, where of about 68,000, or more than half, are in the United States. In countries where government management exists, there are altogether about 10,000 miles of railway. The Belgian government has the greatest proportionate ownership of this nature. In Austria there are 7,000 miles of railway, and Russia possesses 8,000 miles open for traffic, with 5,000 more in course of construction. These figures are the best exhibit of Yankee enterprise. Whatever sneers the European grandees may hurl at our meagre display in the Vienna Exposition, the figures of our material prosperity are retort sufficient to the American mind.

We are permitted to welcome to our table The Hawk-Eye, a new weekly paper issued at Eugene City. It is a small sheet, and is furnished at the low rate of one dollar per year. Its platform of principles and policy is stated in one sentence: "Independent in all things, neutral in nothing." That is exactly the platform for a live paper, if it is lived up to. The Hawk Eye is neat mechanically and sharp editorially. If we felt inclined to speak disparagingly of it, we should be warned by the rap it gives the Guard not to venture too far. That is the most terrific thrust on record, shoving the Guard plump into Prentice's definition of H. W. Scott.

The Oregon Directory by Mr. J. Mortimer Murphy proves upon examination a very complete and thorough work of the kind. It contains much more historical, descriptive and scientific matter than is usually found in books of its class. The climate, soil, productions, timber, mines, topographical features and geology of every section of the State are analyzed and and classified in such way to make the book useful to every person desiring accurate and minute information in regard to Oregon. Besides these matters, it contains a succinct history of the State, and full business directory.

Geo. F. Settlemier, of Linn county, received a telegram on the 21st, informing him that his ticket, No. 370,308, in the Omaha lottery, had drawn $5,000. The telegram was signed "Adam Goodsell," and we think it was.

The Death of Captain Hall.

In an interview with Dr. J. J. Hayes, the well known explorer of Arctic seas, a New York Herald reporter represents that gentleman as suggesting the startling theory that Captain Hall, commander of the Polaris, was murdered by his men. He says: "There was something very mysterious in Captain Hall's death. I wouldn't like to say that he was killed by one of his men in a mutiny, but it would almost look so. I have never known of any one dying of apoplexy in that region, and Captain Hall certainly did not look like an apoplectic man." In answer to the inquiry, "What are the principal causes of the failure of the Hall expedition?" Dr. Hayes said

I think the ship was not fit for the service. I said so in public and in private at the time they started. I said at that time that Captain Hall had no business to go in that ship. This vessel was built for speed, with a flat bottom and square sides, for the navigation of such waters as those of Albemarle Sound during the war, and it was built with a sharp bow and square outwater. Vessels built expressly for ice navigation, such as those of the Newfoundland seal fisheries, are always constructed with a cutwater having a rake of about forty five degrees, which enables them to rise when they strike the ice, and a rounded bottom, which enables the ice, when closing against their sides, to elevate them but of the water with out serious damage to their timbers. These conditions were not fulfilled in the Polaris, and in the absence of more positive information it may be fair to suppose that the injury to the vessel which caused the disaster was owing to these defects.

He regards the escape of the survivors who reached New Brunswick as "the most miraculous thing in the history of personal adventure," and continues:

The object of the sledge expedition in which Captain Hall went a short time before his death must have been to go further north, and to carry a boat with him with which to navigate the Polar Sea. Of course, he would have known when he had reached the North Pole by the fact of the sun shining through the 24 hours, and being at the same altitude above the horizon. Captain Hall was 464 miles from the North Pole. Captain Hall has proven, what I have predicted long ago, that Smith's Sound was navigable, and the true passage into the open Polar Sea, which he seems to have reached. Why he was driven back I cannot tell; probably by drifting ice fields or gales of wind; but I have no doubt he had reached the Polar Sea. There is one remarkable fact about his explorations: he had constant sunshine all the time, and the survivors who were drifting down the south waters were all the time without a ray of sunshine. What a horrible situation—added to all their sufferings—was constant darkness! They had only the light of the stars and of the moon—light enough to move about in pursuit of game, but that was all.

Dr. Hayes does not consider the expedition a failure. To use his own language, he thinks Captain Hall "has done a glorious thing. He has gone further north with his ship than any human being ever did before him—although others have gone as far in sledges.

According to the Herald's statement, there remain on board the Polaris, sixteen men. Among these are S. O. Buddington, sailing master, who is said to be a thorough seaman; Dr. Bessel, of Heidelberg, Germany, a very talented man, who is in charge of the Scientific Department, at a salary of $225 per month, and who joined the expedition at the instance of the celebrated Professor Petermann; and R. W. D. Bryan, astronomer and chaplain. Sergeant Myer, meteorologist to the Polaris, is one of the rescued party. There seems to be a general belief at Washington, that Buddington will bring the Polaris back safely. Dr. Hayes says there is a strong probability that those remaining on board are alive yet, and that they will return by September.

A correspondent of the Herald writes:

Capt. Hall is stated to have died on the 8th of October, 1871. The Polaris left winter quarters August 12 1872, and on the 15th was on her beam ends and commenced drifting south to 77 35, when preparations were made to abandon her.

When was the expedition ever Kane's open sea made? This and other very important discrepancies and inconsistencies can only be cleared up by the return of the Polaris.

She seems, by Tyson's report, to have stood away, and was last seen in a good harbor, sails furled and fires out and we feel she is yet safe and will come out in August. Being in the track of sealers, they can, even if the Polaris is disabled, readily reach St Johns; but it would seem incumbent upon our Government to send a vessel to Disco as early as practicable to assist them if is required.

Tyson's proposition that he left the Polaris leaky and unseaworthy, and then complaining that she steamed away, leaving them to their fate, sounds inconsistent. That he should have with him all the guides, all the boats, and many Germans of the crew, is singular. That his party subsisted and remained in such good health during six months of the arctic night; that an infant, only four months old at the time of going upon the ice, passed through such exposure, through such meager subsistence for the mother, seems singular. Early at the commencement of the cruise there was trouble, disputes and insubordination on board to such an extent that Captain Davenport advised, as the easiest and proper method to settle them, to give the offenders a dance at the yardarm, or quietly send them home in irons by the Congress

A Washington dispatch states that an additional postal convention between the United States and Belgium has just been agreed upon and signed by the Postmaster-General and the Belgian Minister. It will take effect July 1st, reducing the single rate of letter postage in closed mails via England from ten to eight cents, and establishing a six cent rate for letters sent by direct steamers. A line is now running between Philadelphia and Antwerp, and another will be established from New York soon, by either of which the single rate to Belgium will be six cents from and after July 1st.

The cotton merchants of the East are in rebellion against the high tariffs of the Atlantic cables. At a meeting held in New York recently over two hundred flams were represented. The agent of the Direct United States Cable Company stated that their cable would be completed within a year. The new cable will be laid directly from the coast of Ireland to that of New Hampshire. The agent said that the company would not consolidate with any existing organization, but would lay a second cable as soon as possible. The Cotton Exchange resolved to support the new enterprise.

An English scientific journal states that tool steel is being sent in bulky lots from Sheffield to the United States for manufacturing purposes. Portland, Maine, is the distributing point for Canadian ports. There seems to be an apprehension that American cutlery will yet displace the famous productions of Sheffield. This may be when we have ceased our national habit of "carrying coals to Newcastle."

PRINTING OFFICE FOR SALE.—A Newspaper and a thoroughly equipped Job office, in one of the most thriving towns on the N. W. coast, is for sale. Does a large amount of Job work and has a large and increasing subscription list and is otherwise prosperous. Either a half or whole interest will be sold. TERMS part cash and part on time, or will trade for negotiable paper. The proprietor has a business engagement in the States, and offers to sell for that reason only. For particulars enquire of H. L. Pittock, Portland.

CANYON CITY, May 17, 1873.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

A few years since we had occasion to inform the military authorities through the OREGONIAN of Indian hostilities in this section, and the consequent murder of many peaceable citizens in this, the John Day valley. The loss in property to our citizens by these (Snake) Indians, amounts in the aggregate to several hundred thousand dollars, only a small portion of which, to our knowledge has yet been made good by the general government.

You are well aware, Mr Editor, that these acts of barbarity and theft were unprovoked on the part of the white settlers that our citizens were peaceably disposed and rather evaded than sought a conflict with these Indians. Yet in the face of all this, the lonely graves which, like mile posts, mark the highway between Canyon City and Snake river, remain as monitors for the traveler to beware, for he knows not the hour nor the moment when some concealed "Snake in the grass" may be leveling his gun to take the deadly aim.

Very few of the parties concerned in the murders intervening the years 1852 and 1868, have ever been brought to justice. True, Gen. Crook made "peaceable Indians" of some of them and taught others the power of the Government, yet there still remains a latent hostility which, like the fires of a volcano momentarily surcharged, will only break forth in greater violence when the proper time, to them, arrives. This time, we apprehend, is near at hand.

We do not wish to act the part of an alarmist, nor give undue weight to this already exciting question. We have withheld our pen in hopes the Indian firmament would seem more clear, and the fears of our people subside. Instead of this, the signs are ominous, the demonstrations are significant, our fears are increasing and we are urged to write—write for assistance, for protection to the people of this valley.

There still remains on the Malheur and its tributaries a detached band of Snake Indians—outlaws and marauders, those who have never given themselves up, nor in any way complied with the treaty stipulations of Gen. Crook. Their movements, all along, have been looked upon with suspicion; yet, as they have been well aware of the power in arms at Camp Harney, no flagrant acts of violence, to our knowledge, have been committed—only a man, now and then, fired upon at long range, or a beef killed occasionally for their own sustenance. Times, however, have changed. This band has become emboldened and exhibits a greater degree of impudence than for several years past.

We learn that the Indians of Camp Harney, numbering several hundred, have unceremoniously left that post and gone, we know not whither. They also gave signs of insubordination and hostility prior to their exit.

The Snake Indians are numerous, and roam over territory 60,000 square miles in extent. Camp Harney, if properly garrisoned, is favorably located in times of peace, to command obedience from this whole band, or at least prevent any wholesale murders such as have marked the history of this and other Indian countries; but in such times as these, when a handful of Modocs defy the power of the Government, and the great and mighty fall before them like grain before the sickle—when Capt. Jack, like a Leonidas, beats back the advancing hosts of Gen. Gillem, and when nearly all the tribes east of the mountains seem to be confederating for some desperate purpose, Camp Harney cannot give the necessary protection to the people of this valley. A company of soldiers, if only temporarily located here, might have the effect of preventing a raid upon the settlers and save the lives of many of our citizens, including women and children. We learn that several hundred Indians are now encamped on the North Fork of the John Day. The settlers there have become greatly alarmed on account of their belligerent demonstrations, and six families have already left for places of safety. Mr. McDuffey, who has just arrived here from that point, informs us that he left his plow in an unfinished furrow, his crop partly in and everything to be ravaged by these Indians and their large band of Cayuse horses. Several hundred Indians have also camped within a few miles of Canyon City so we have been informed. Yesterday they sent in a small party to purchase powder and other articles of warfare, but our merchants positively refused to let them have anything in that line, and so they returned disappointed to the main band and mountains. Our people are greatly alarmed and urgently protest against soldiers being taken from Camp Harney, at this time, for the Modoc country.

Our valley is so peculiarly located that 200 Indians could in one night overrun and murder every family in it, and then make their escape to the mountains on either side.

It is useless for Peace Commissioners to notify us that they do not expect any trouble with the Snake or other Indians of this country, or for public journals to pronounce our fears unfounded or premature, for while it is well known that the former have before been mistaken in judgment, and the latter do nearly all their fighting in populous cities, with "gray goosequills," we have had enough of the malicious treachery of these Indians not to trust them; only they are kept in awe by superior power.

Several efforts have been made to organize a company of volunteers at this place, but as the meetings were divided in sentiment as to the particular kind, or under what authority, nothing positive has yet been accomplished.

The spinosity is raging throughout this county. All teams move slowly, some horses have been turned out to graze, which is considered the best remedy. No fatal cases as yet. D B R.

AUTHORIZED TO SOLICIT.—The Portland and East Portland Bridge Company have authorized Messrs. S. J. McCormick, J. A. Strowbridge, G. W. Johnson and P. Kelly to solicit subscriptions to the capital stock of the company. These gentlemen will commence the work at once of canvassing the city for subscriptions. The enterprise seems to meet with public favor, and the prospects of success are quite flattering.

VIOLATION OF THE PASSENGER ACT.—The Captain of the ship Canadienne, has been arrested for bringing into port from Hongkong, forty-three more passengers than the capacity of the ship will allow. The penalty is $50 fine for each passenger so brought. The preliminary examination will be held on Monday next at one o'clock P. M., before the U. S. Commissioner.

TO BE POSTPONED.—We are requested by the administrator of the estate of Wm. E. Cooper, deceased, to state that the sale of the real property belonging to the estate, will not come off to-day, but will be postponed from time to time till the 7th day of June—two weeks from to-day—at which time the sale will positively take place without further delay.

DELIVERED TO PROSECUTE.—The river steamer Oneatta, from Yaquina Bay, has been seized for coming into the Columbia river without inspection and license. We understand the U. S. Attorney thinks there was no intention on the part of the owners to violate the law, and has declined to prosecute and referred the case to the Secretary of the Treasury.

APPROPRIATE DISCOURSES.—In compliance with a request made by Baker Post No. 1, G. A. R., several leading ministers of the city will deliver appropriate sermons at their respective churches to-morrow in commemoration of the dead soldiers who fell during the late civil war in defence of the nation's integrity and imperiled honor.

THROUGH THE LOCKS.—The steamer Annie Stewart will leave the wharf at the foot of Alder street this morning at 8 o'clock with the excursionists for the picnic grounds opposite Canemah.

ACTIVE BADGES.—Mr. Ball, Secretary of the Portland Fire Department, desires the holders of active fire badges Nos. 689 and 724 to return them to him a once and avoid trouble.

Thirteen journalists from Chicago, Springfield, Quincy and Bloomington, Illinois, and St. Louis, Missouri, arrived at Denver, Colorado on the 13th inst., on a tour to the Pacific coast.

CASES.—The steamers brought up last evening over 350 cases of canned salmon, from the fisheries. It will be shipped on the next steamer for San Francisco.

SALE OF REAL ESTATE.—Mr. A. B. Richardson sold at auction on Wednesday morning lots 1 and 2 in block 192, Caruthers' Addition, for the sum of $1,875.

ANNUAL MEETING.—An annual meeting of the British Benevolent Society will be held this evening at the office of the Vice Consul.

NO BOAT.—We are requested to state that no boat will be dispatched to Lewiston by the O. S. N. Co., the coming week.

PERSONAL.

Geo. Knaggs is in the city.

Geo. L. DePrans, manager of Gray's Music Store, is "doing" Astoria.

Col. D. H. Lyman, Special Agent of the Treasury Department, took his departure last evening for San Francisco.

Among the passengers who left yesterday evening on the Orifiamme was Mr. H. F. Cutter, agent for and Director of the Pacific Land Company.

John F. Kidder, a well known railroad man and civil engineer, who has been in the State for several years, left on the steamer yesterday for California.

We acknowledge a call yesterday from Rev. S. Blakeley, editor and proprietor of the Pacific, published in San Francisco. Mr. Blakely came from Victoria, via the Sound, on a canvassing and corresponding tour for his paper. To-day he will leave for Washington county, and from there will proceed overland to California.

Lieuts. R. H. Clark and W. R. Hand, who have been connected with the Marine Service in and about Alaska for the last two years, on board the revenue schooner Reliance, both depart for the East on the steamer. These officers have been ordered to report at the Department for duty. Clark will be stationed at Newport, R. I., and Hand at Portland, Maine.

Capt. G. A. Miller, of Tennessee, who arrived on the last trip of the John L. Stephens, reports that some 500 farms are offered for sale at one agency in the State, the intention of many of the farmers desirous of selling being to emigrate to Oregon. Capt. Miller is looking after the interest of such friends at home who intend coming here. During the war Capt. Miller was on the staff of Gen. Gillem, and informs us that the General was not in command at the time or of the party which shot Gen. Morgan. The man who killed Morgan was a private named Campbell.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

Madame Anna Bishop is coming to Oregon.

Frank Mayo was at Rochester, New York, May 10th.

Miss Anna Mehlig, the pianist, made her last (?) appearance in America at Steinway Hall, New York city on May 16th.

Little Charley Fox, the baby clown of the Fox Family, now traveling with Cooper's Circus, died at Louisville, Kentucky, on April 28th. The family played here many years ago.

Geo. Ryland the circus manager, was in Guatemala, Central America with a troupe on March 28th. From that point the party was to have gone to San Salvador, Panama, and finally bring up at San Francisco about June first.

Says a San Francisco paper of the sweet singer: "Phillip Phillips, the naval singer of Israel, performed at the Central M. E. Church at Stockton on the 15th inst. Admission fifty cents; children half price." Very cooling indeed.

COURT PROCEEDINGS.

CIRCUIT COURT, SPECIAL TERM—STRONG, J.

FRIDAY, May 23, 1873.

O. & C. R. R. Co. vs. James H. Lappass; motion for judgment and decree for want of answer and cross motion for leave to demur or answer; no answer having been filed by defendant within the time allowed by law, ordered that proceedings be stayed until final order of the Court on motion for injunction prayed for.

Walter Bros. vs A. M. Lorrez; judgment by default for $2,878 16 coin and accruing interest.

W. H. Adams vs Jacob Stitzel et al.; judgment for plaintiff for $1,800, interest and costs.

James Elliot vs Arthur Fable et ux.; cause dismissed.

J. P. O. Lownsdale and J. W. King, administrators, vs H. Boyd; judgment in conformity with mandate from Supreme Court.

Bank of British Columbia vs F. L. Tileston et al.; Sheriff's sale confirmed.

L. M. Starr vs H. H. Tuttle; motion to strike demurrer from files allowed and decree granted.

Bank of British Columbia vs Western Union Telegraph Company; cause resubmitted to the Court.

SPECIAL CHURCH NOTICES.

The subject of the evening sermon in the Unitarian church, Rev. T. L. Eliot, pastor, will be suggested by the coming service of Decoration Day.

There will be preaching in the German language to-morrow at 3:30 in the vestry of the First Presbyterian Church, corner of Third and Washington streets, by the Rev. H. Gass.

At the First Congregational Church to-morrow morning, Mr. Eaton will speak upon a subject suggested by the approaching Decoration Day. The topic in the evening will be "Hymnology," illustrated by reference to particular hymns, and applied by congregational singing. Seats free.

If you want the woven wire bed, parlor and bedroom suits, the best spring and pure hair mattress, go to Hargens & Shindler.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

Excursions are popular.

A standing nuisance—corner loafers.

New York mails arrive now in ten days.

Music and coffee at Fabre's, Central Market.

Ajax, for this port, leaves the Golden City to-day.

Everybody in town was talking base ball last night—to be continued to-day.

Pulverized alum and salt is said to be a sure cure for the toothache in five minutes.

Gen. Davis will make it warm for Captain Jack. The latter is seeking safer quarters.

Postoffice clerks sport roses in their button holes. They affirm that young ladies present them twice a week. Too thin.

A gentleman living on Fourth street, not far from Morrison, went fishing this week, and returned with a mess consisting of one fish, diminutive at that. Try again.

BASE BALL.

Several games of base ball will be played to-day in this vicinity.

From a late New York paper we glean the following base ball notice: May 7th—at Philadelphia, Athletic, 12; Washington, (D. C.,) 3. May 10th—at Baltimore, second game for championship, Baltimore, 7; Philadelphia, 4. May 12th—at Philadelphia, Mutual, 4; Philadelphia, 5. The clubs playing to above games are in the championship arena.

The Pioneer Club have forwarded a challenge to the College Club of Salem, the strongest Club in the State at the present time. Should arrangements be effected, a close and exciting game may be anticipated between these Clubs. A committee from the Pioneer Club will select a uniform next week, and from what we can learn the idea is to get something nobby.

This morning the Pacific Base Ball Club, accompanied by a large delegation of admirers of the game, will take passage on the Annie Stewart for Oregon City, at which place they will play the deciding match, immediately after their arrival, with the Rustlers of that city. As an evidence of the interest taken in the game we are informed that several hundred dollars are pending on the result of the contest. Our base ball reporter will be on the ground to see how matters progress and will furnish our readers with a description of the game, provided the pretty girls don't take up too much of his attention. The Oregon City boys will work hard to win the game, and the same feeling exists with their opponents.

FASHIONABLE NOTES.

Shopping is brisk among ladies.

Light dresses are becoming more fashionable daily.

Ladies have taken a delight in equestrian movements, and pairs are seen almost every evening.

Blue flannel, garnished with black or white braid, is very much worn by petit boys; also, the kilt-plaited skirt garments, which cannot fail to please mamma.

The most equestrian shoe of the period is, by all odds, the Richelieu, and for style it has no compeer. It is made of black or bronze kid, with a moderate heel.

An effort is being made among some would-be fashionable ladies to revive the blonde fashion. Dyes are not used, but a fine and injurious powder known as "brick dust" is.

For a girl of ten summers a pretty striped silk promenade dress is quite stylish; the skirt reaching nearly to the top of the French kid boots, the garniture consisting of tiny ruffles.

White straws are much worn by juveniles, and the garniture is of black velvet ribbon, flowers and narrow lace. Plumes are passe for petite's chapeau. White goods of every description is fashionable for children from one hour old up the age of ten years, when mamma's pet must begin to dress in a less juvenile style.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

Oscar Kilbourne will dispose of a choice assortment of furniture, this morning. Read his procla mation.

Charley Talbot has resumed the photographic business once more. He proposes to produce pictures as good as can be had anywhere. His place is at 135 Front street, and everything is as comfortable as you please.

Ben Franklin said, "a penny saved is a penny earned" and now at the Oregon Book and Shoe Store they are endeavoring to afford purchasers an opportunity to practice the above adage. Don't neglect this chance bear in mind Beer & Kingsley's

THE TERRITORIES.

Lovers of fine landscape views at Olympia climb the new steeple on the Presbyterian Church. A local paper says that the sight pays for the labor.

Another daily paper, the sixth in that city, is to be started in Salt Lake on or about June first. Publishing papers there is extremely tempting, whereas those already in existence are enriching their owners to a fabulous extent.

The Salt Lake Tribune Publishing Company has been sued for $50,000 for libel. That paper says: "Before the matter is settled there will be some persons who are mixed up in it whose commercial and moral reputation will be irretrievably ruined."

The Corinne Reporter says: "M. Berger, the versatile Bonifacse of Malad City, Idaho, has been appointed interpreter to the Indian Commission now on the way to Fort Hall. Though not an aborigine himself, Mr. Berger has acquired a perfect knowledge of all the savage dialects spoken on the western slope of the Rocky Mountains, and handles a tomahawk with the dexterity of a Piegan."

A late storm in Shoalwater Bay caused the estimated loss of nearly if not quite a million baskets of oysters in that region, the strength of wind having shifted vast quantities of sand, in many places covering the oyster-beds to a depth of several feet. The loss amounted to over one hundred thousand dollars, but was divided among a large number so that no one was ruined by it.

The Tillamook Wagon Road is progressing finely. Five or six miles are completed at the Tillamook end of the road, and a mile or more at this end, where work has only recently begun. The proprietors say they propose to eat dinner and feed their teams in this valley on the first of July, having made the trip over the new wagon road. This will be a new era in the life of Tillamook, and the change from pack mules to the more commodious wagons must certainly be a relief to those who have considerable carrying to do.

We sincerely trust time will prove that the fears of the people of Grant county, mentioned by our correspondent, whose letter appears this morning, are without foundation. But we know from an extended personal acquaintance with that section of country, that there ought always to be a good strong military force there.

ON DECK.—Mr. Charles Talbot has opened his Photographic Gallery at 135 First street, where he proposes to produce pictures equal to the best, and at prices that will enable all who desire anything in his line an opportunity to have their "Photos" taken. Be sure to call and see him, and recollect the number.

If you want pure, fine liquors of any kind, go to E. D. Tyne's, northwest corner of Oak and First streets, agent or the sale of Jessie Moore & Co.'s fine Old Hourbon and Rye Whiskies of Louisville, Ky.

Mr. John Kennedy, formerly of the Philadelphia Shoe Store, is now at the San Francisco Shoe Store with Fleischner & Crone, where he will be pleased to wait upon his friends and customers, with one of the largest and finest stocks of boots and shoes on the coast. He will also continue to take measures for ladies' custom-made shoes.

For a fashionable suit of clothing, and the necessary outfit to make the attire of a well dressed man complete, call at J. O'Neil & Co.'s, where a new stock of cloths and furnishing goods have been placed upon the counters and shelves, ready for the inspection of customers. They furnish you with anything you desire at moderate rates, and will fill orders with dispatch.

A first-class photograph is worth a good price. A poor one is of no value whatever. Therefore the motto of Buchtel & Stolte is—Superior work, equal to any in the United States, for which we demand a good price, and receive the same. Our new Viewing Wagon, for Scenic Views, is now ready, and all orders for pictures of buildings, etc., promptly attended to, at the First Premium Gallery, No. 91 First street, Portland, Oregon.

DRESS WELL.—The young man who desires his "make-up" complete should always select the place where the articles desired can be obtained. For a neat-fitting suit, made of the very finest goods, the public is directed to the house of Fleischner & Co., as an establishment which ranks with the leading houses on the coast. The stock is complete, the attention paid to customers great, and the promptness with which orders are filled, at once commends this house to all.

The public mind has been somewhat agitated with the Modoc war, an invasion of marine or railway disputes, and the dull times, and the prospect of buying clothing at a figure not large enough to call a man to the bankrupt. The place has been found where you can buy men and boys' clothing, or gentlemen's furnishing goods, at the very lowest prices. It is at Beck & Abrahamson's, corner of Front and Washington streets, where a full assortment of men and boys' clothing, in the latest styles, can be selected from.

There are several kinds of soap which trouble horses in the pin-worms, pointed at both ends, are the most common and most dangerous. Hendee's Celebrated Condition Powders will in a few days expel the worms, and the horse will begin to thrive.

Factories and machine shops should not be allowed to run a day without Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. In case of a sudden accident, an immediate use of it may save weeks of suffering, and perhaps a limb, or even life.

Upon the health of the blood depends the quality of the breath. Purify the latter by the use of the famous BOZODONT, that perfectly harmless vegetable preparation, and you will never regret it. 31

COLEMAN'S EUCALYPTUS

Dr. J. A. Colman's Concentrated Extract of Eucalyptus globulus is a preparation which is called the Australian Fever Tree, which is celebrated for its great medicinal utility, having been the household remedy for all diseases of the KIDNEYS, BLADDER, URINARY CANAL, and SEMINAL WEAKNESS. It is used to have a direct affinity for the GENITO-URINARY GLANDS and their surroundings, and cures them by its curative, healing and tonic power, when other known remedy.

It is an invaluable remedy for all diseases of the throat and lungs, such as BRONCHITIS, HACKING COUGH, NAUSEA DURING PREGNANCY, DYSPEPSIA, MALARIA, LEUCORRHŒA, etc. This preparation is the result of Dr. Colman's many years of experience as Physician and Surgeon in the U. S. Marine Hospital in San Francisco, which he had under his charge in 1871 and 1872. He had ample opportunity of preparing the remedy, and its use, and can speak upon as certain to get the best results of all diseases of its efficacy can be seen at his office, 408 Kearney street, San Francisco. COLEMAN'S DOUBLE EXTRACT OF EUCALYPTUS globulus is a powerful, yet safe tonic, and is warranted to cure any case of FEVER AND AGUE in the worst form, and is a special preparation for the bowel complaints of children, when all other remedies fail. Calomel and other mineral poisons are entirely avoided.

FOR INVIGORATING, Colman's Fluid Extract of Eucalyptus is the best remedy known. It will make the weak strong, and the nervous full of vitality. For sale by druggists generally. Beware of imitations, and take none but COLEMAN'S. For sale by all druggists. H. H. Hall, Odell & Co., Wholesale Agents for Oregon.

THE FEATHER CANOE.

A LEGEND OF THE ST. MAURICE RIVER, CANADA.

I.

Once upon a time, a long while ago, when the skies were nearer mortals and the gods were more familiar, when men were braver, women fairer, moose faster and marketing cheaper than now-a-days, there lived on the shores of the Metaberoutin two young men, Ah-ra-kee and Ah-sa-kee, "He who loves children" and "He who hates children." Ah-ra-kee was tall and slight, with a step like a fox and an eye like a sunbeam. He never moved through his village without a train of dogs and children after him, while in the woods the red squirrel sat on his shoulder to chatter to him hunting secrets, and the birds sang their sweetest as he passed by. Ah-sa-kee, on the other hand, seemed to bring a silence with him on the blithest day, and you could tell when he was coming your way by an advanced guard of dogs, each with his tail between his legs and howling more dismally than his immediate predecessor.

II.

One day the Great Chief of the Algonquins called a council of his warriors and made the following speech, which was punctuated with puffs of willowbark smoke and moved the auditors into a chronic state of "Ugh!"

"Fathers and young warriors, hear me! My daughter, Smile of Light, must marry. I am old. You must soon have a new Chief to lead you to battle. A son must come to my wigwam that I may be strong. Hear! To the warrior who brings me a Feather Canoe, like my Feather Canoe as berry on the bush is like berry, I will give my daughter. I have spoken."

Having said what he had to say, the Great Chief of the Algonquins said nothing more. He would never have made a popular preacher.

III.

The Great Chief's Feather Canoe was a jewel; such as had never been seen on the banks of the Metaberoutin. It was covered with feathers, as glossy and beautiful as those on the neck of the wild drake. It could expand or contract, so as to carry one person or a whole tribe. It moved in the water swiftly as the masculonge could swim, and in the air more fleetly than the hawk could fly. It had no paddles to move or guide it, but whereso-ever its owner wished that it should go, there it went.

The young warriors, when they heard the proclamation of the Great Chief, were variously affected. The more philosophic sat down and smoke, and concluded that Smile of Light was not half so beautiful as people generally imagined come to think of it, she painted. But the younger and more romantic got out into the woods and roamed about, finding actually of a light sienna color with bright. They would have carved her name on every tree, but they did not know their letters, which alone accounts for the preservation of the American pine forests. One after another decided that to build another Feather Canoe was impossible, and gave up the attempt all save two—Ah-ra-kee and Ah-sa-kee.

IV.

Early one bright May morning Ah-sa-kee flung his axe over his shoulder, took a piece of venison in his bag and slunk into the woods. He was going to try to build a Feather Canoe, but was so sulky and suspicious that he did not wish any one else to know this. When he had gone some distance into the wood, he saw, sitting by the way-side, a woman old and merely dressed

"Good morning my son," said she; I am hungry: give me to eat."

"Haven't a bite of anything about me," replied Ah sa kee.

"Whither are you going and what to do?" she continued.

"Going to chop snow-shovels," he replied.

"Well then, snow-shovels be it," said the old woman and in a moment there was no old woman there, but only a blackbird.

Ah-ra-kee went deeper into the wood. At last he came to a tall, straight tree.

"This will do for the keel of my Feather Canoe," said he, as he drove his axe into the tree. Stroke after stroke fell, chip after chip flew off, till carried by his assertions, he paused and looked around.

Snow shovels it was! Every chip which had fallen straight from the tree had turned into a snow shovel. Ten thousand snow-shovels sprang around him mockingly, like warriors on a five at the stake. He dropped his axe and fled, and the ten thousand snow shovels clapped their hands, gave a yell of triumph and ran after him. On he fled, through and tangled underbrush, into pitfalls, over rivers, down precipices, up mountains, until suddenly, the huge pine had turned into a snow-shovel and, overtaking him with giant strides, shovelled him up with a mighty fling, so high into the air that he looked no bigger than the wa-wa, the wild goose, flying northward. Which is the end of Ah-sa-kee.

V.

Early next morning Ah-ra-kee arose, took his axe and some venison and, in his turn, marched into the forest. He, too, was going to try and build a Feather Canoe. He had not gone far when he met the same old woman, sitting in rags, sitting by the way-side.

"Good morning, my son," said she, "I am hungry; give me to eat."

"Morning, mother," said he cheerfully; "take this; small as it is, 'tis all my store," he added, thus anticipating by several centuries the pious Watts. So he gave her what food he had with him.

"Whose are you going and what to do?" she queried.

"Going to try and build a Feather Canoe," he answered.

"Feather Canoe be it, then," she said, and when he looked again, there was no old woman but a beautiful bluebird, swinging in the single sunbeam that shot through the trees. Then he knew that he had seen Kabun, the god of the children, who makes the buds grow and paints the shells upon the eggs.

Ah-ra-kee went deeper into the wood, till he came to a tall, straight pine tree.

"This will do," said he, "will do for the keel of my Feather Canoe," and he drove the his into it. A chip flew out. Something made him look up.

Feather Canoe it was! A real Feather Canoe, large as that of the Great Chief and ten times handsomer, gay as colors with the neck of the wood pigeon, like the Feather Canoe of the Great Chief as one berry on the bush is to another berry.

So he entered it and, immediately, rose into the air and over the tops of the green trees, blown by the fresh morning wind, then dipped down into the bosom of the river and sailed swiftly and steadily towards the house of Smile of Light, because the steering-paddle knew its owner's thoughts, and his every thought was of her:

VI.

As they sailed up the river, Ah-ra-kee saw a man standing on the bank, carelessly twisting between his fingers three tall pine trees, as an old squaw might interlace thongs of deer-hide in making a snow-shoe.

"Who are you and what are you doing?" hailed Ah-ra-kee.

"My name is Strong Arm and I am fixing to bring to tie my moccasin with; the string's broken, was the answer, and Ah-ra-kee engaged him as one of the crew.

A little further on they saw another man, laying his ear to the ground in an attitude of intense attention.

"Who are you and what are you doing?" said Ah-ra-kee.

"My name is Fine Ear, yes, it is—hush, it is growing! I knew it!"

"What is growing? you know what?" asked Ah-ra-kee.

"Nothing, only last week I sowed my oats on my farm some fifty leagues from here, and I felt convinced that this mild spring weather would bring them above ground. I hear them growing as distinctly as if I were there." So Ah-ra-kee engaged him as one of the crew.

A little farther on they saw a man come out of his wigwam, closing the curtain carefully behind him. They hailed him and he answered thus:

"My name is Fleet-Foot. If you want anything particularly, speak. I have an engagement at the Gulf of Mexico at noon, but I can spare you five minutes."

So they engaged him also, and the Feather Canoe sped merrily onwards.

A little farther on they saw a man come to the river's edge and stoop to drink. When, he raised his head the river was not half so wide as it was before. This was Big-mouth, a great hunter and still greater eater and drinker. When he was travelling and came to a creek he found it quicker to drink it up than to swim across it. In this manner he left innumerable ravines and watercourses all through Canada and Northern New York, which exist to this day. What we of a later day should have done for water I really do not know, but he would eat his buffaloes with the horns on and one day he was choked, to the great joy of the sawmill proprietors and Good Templars. He, too, was engaged—at ten beaver-belts a moon—and board himself.

Then Ah-ra-kee found two other men, one of whom a metaphysician, who could wink fog, and the other a politician, who could sneeze thunder and whistle tornadoes, and, with his crew thus complete, the Feather Canoe sailed into the presence of the Great Chief and his daughter, Smile of the Light.

And when the people saw the Feather Canoe they rubbed their eyes and remarked:

"She, now, it can't be!"

But it was.

It generally is.

VII.

When the—but, by the way, I have not yet described Smile of Light.

Nor can I describe her. She was prettier than your cousin at Christmas time. A sunbeam in a blanket, a star in moccasins—no smile can be found to give you an exact idea of what she was like. Her hair was finer than maize-silk and blacker than the wing of the blackbird. Her eyes were like stars on a river of a calm night. Her lips were redder than the strawberries and her breath like the breath of pine woods after rain. Her foot-fall was like the snowfall. Grass grew greener where she walked, and when she smiled the girls in the village went out and butted their heads against the trees and wished she had the small-pox. Now you can form a faint idea of her.

VIII.

When, I repeat, the Great Chief saw Ah-ra-kee and the Feather Canoe, he knew that the hard conditions had been complied with, and his daughter fairly won. But Ah-ra-kee was poor and not the sort of husband that he desired for Smile of Light, so he resolved to try and cheat Ah-ra-ke of his bride and obtain possession of the Feather Canoe by setting his some impossible task.

So the Great Chief made a great feast, and he, his daughter, Ah-ra-kee, Strong Arm, Fine Ear, Fleet Foot, Big Mouth, and the others of the crew sat down to it. They had a couple of partridges, and a buffalo roasted whole, and some berries.

"Your see your dinner," said the Great Chief, and closed his eyes piously to say grace.

"I do—Amen!" said Big Mouth, swallowing berries, birds and buffalo before the Great Chief could open his eyes, "but I don't see yours."

The Chief Medicine Man was astonished and, with eyes protruding from his head, he observed: "Heavens! what a mouth!"

Dear children, it is very wrong to make remarks about a stranger's behavior at table. The Great Chief knew this and ordered two warriors to remove the Chief Medicine Man and tomahawk him. So the Chief Medicine Man was led away to execution, but at the door of the lodge he paused, and, looking at Big Mouth like a bird fascinated by a rattlesnake, remarked: "I know its very rude but heavens! what a mouth!"

"My son," said the wily old chief, "you got the Feather Canoe without trouble. So fair a bride should only be won by deeds greater than that were done before. I will feast you and your friends, and if one of them can eat all that is set before him and then not be satisfied my daughter shall be yours."

Then the Great Chief gathered all the maize in all the villages of his tribe and set all the squaws to bake it, and they piled up the loaves in hills on the beach.

"Mercy me!" said the Smile of Light, "the man never can eat all that horrid bread!"

By and by Big Mouth came loitering down to the beach and said: "Now, then, dinner; and be quick about it," and sat down before the mountain of bread. Four stout warriors with pitchforks began throwing the loaves into his mouth.

How he ate! People began to feel a sympathy for the late Chief Medicine Man. The mountains of bread melted away, like fogbanks at sunrise. The four stout warriors toiled till they fell dead from exhaustion and fresh ones stepped forward in their places. At least sixty loaves were in the air at the same time. Occasionally an excited feeder would lose his hold and throw the fork along with the loaf into the insatiate and insatiable mouth, but the diner never noticed it. At last the meal was done. There was not left to the tribe a crust, a crumb, a single kernel of corn. The crows began to emigrate to Egypt. Ah-ra-kee and Smile of Light were happy. Big Mouth turned to the Great Chief and said: "What sort of pie have you to-day?"

IX.

But the Great Chief was not yet satisfied.

"My son," said he to the lover of Smile of Light, "in the frosty Caucasus there is a great medicine which makes the arrow rebound from a warrior's body like hail from a rock. Bring me the great medicine by noon—it is now 11:45—and my daughter is yours."

Ah-ra-kee signed to Fleet Foot. He was gone.

"Bless me!" remarked the Great Chief, "what a particularly vivid flash of lightning that was; but I didn't hear any thunder."

In 2 16½ Fleet Foot had reached the frosty Caucasus. He seized the great medicine and hurried homeward On his way he met a malevolent old twitch.

"Friend," said she, "you are wearied taste of this vial and your strength shall be increased."

Fleet Foot hastily drained the vial of its contents. A drowsiness came over him. He thought of the sermons he might hear of sultry summer Sunday afternoons if he only had been born five thousand years later: of the "Castle of Indolence" which Thompson would write, of the chloroform Sir James Simpson was yet to invent; of the North American Review, and similar subjects. A haze came over his eyes, he felt a singing in his ears; in a minute he was sound asleep—sound as Rip Van Winkle sound as the Seven Sleepers of Ephesus—sound as a gross of assorted tops.

So the minutes fled fast; now only ten remained, then but nine, eight, seven, six. Had a reporter of originality been there he would have said that the most intense excitement prevailed. Fleet Foot came not.

"Fine Ear," said Ah-ra-kee anxiously, "listen, perhaps you can hear him coming."

Fine Ear laid his head to the ground. "Hush!" said he; "yes—yes, I hear him snoring. He is asleep, a little this side of the Alleghanies, but beyond the Hudson."

Then Ah-ra-kee signed to the great progenitor of ward politicians, and he sneezed thunder and whistled whirlwinds and there was a terrible tempest. The rolling of the thunder and the cracking of the great trees as they fell aroused Flett Foot; he started up, seized the great medicine and fled homeward, arriving in safety, with nearly a minute to spare.

X

Still the great chief was not satisfied. Great chiefs rarely are satisfied.

"My son," he said, "a third and final trial yet remains. If you succeed then—bless you, my children.' Have you in your company a man strong enough to lift all the gold and silver in all the villages of my tribe?"

"I believe I have," was Ah-ra-kee's reply.

So the Great Chief commanded, and they made a great iron chest as big as a mountain, and they heaped together all the gold and all the silver from all the villages of the tribe and placed it in the chest. Then Strong Arm lay down and they placed the huge load upon him. He stirred it slightly.

"Can you move it?" asked the Great Chief.

"I think," answered Strong Arm, "that I could carry about one hundred and twenty-six pounds more.

"Dear me!" ejaculated Smile of Light, "that's just my weight!" and she sprang nimbly into the chest, upon all the gold and silver.

Then Strong Arm rose, as if he had but a pack of furs upon his back. In three steps he, the treasures, and Smile of Light were safely on board the Feather Canoe; Ah-ra-kee and the others of the crew followed, and the Feather Canoe turned and fled swiftly down the river, towards the Enchanted Gates of the Sunset.

XI.

The Great Chief and his warriors seized their bows and arrows and launched the other Feather Canoe to pursue the fugitives.

Then Ah-ra-kee commanded and the primal metaphysician and patron of ward politicians went to the stern of the Feather Canoe. They winked fog and thick darkness, and sneezed thunder and whistled whirlwinds. A terrible tempest came down and settled around the Feather Canoe of the Great Chief and drove it from its course and wrecked it.

But never storm nor cloud came near Ah-ra-kee and his Smile of Light. They sailed down the river of turquoise, between banks of emerald, and under one faint streak of saffron sky into the Golden Land.

Here the old half-breed, my companion by the camp fire, as we lay on our elbows beneath our blankets, ceased, took his pipe from his lips and used his little finger as a tobacco-stopper.

"Well, Andre," said I.

"Eh bien, m'sieu; that's all."

"And so they lived long and died happy, and all that sort of thing, eh?"

"Mais, non, m'sieu; those people there never die."

It is, perhaps, true that they who, through love, attain unto the purest experience, never grow old, nor change, nor pass away.

COMMERCE AND COMMERCIAL.

Financial.

FRIDAY EVENING, May 23, 1873.

Gold in New York to-day, 117⅞.

Portland Legal Tender rates, 85½ buying; 86½ selling

Gold bars are quotable at 890 fine

Wheat in Liverpool—Average California, 12s 3d@12s 6d; club, 12s 6d.

The prospect in financial matters seems to be much more encouraging, and the pressure to be greatly relaxed.

The Commercial Reporter of this week makes an estimate of the number of immigrants arrived and to arrive in this State during four months ending July 1st at 3,500 persons. These, the same paper supposes, bring with them an average of $200 each This would make an addition to the capital of our State of over a million dollars, which would certainly tend in a great measure to alleviate the scarcity, as these immigrants will in many cases invest their means in the products of the country, in farms and in business.

American and English Produce

Agricultural statistics show that in quantity and quality of produce, England is at least not behind other European nations, and that America is generally abreast of her. Already American beef can compete with the best consumed in England, our mutton is coming up to the English standard, and except that they are not cumbrous with excessive fat, which is a fault on the right side, American is as good as the English porcine produce. The average live weight of English and American cattle is 800 pounds, which is 100 pounds over that of other countries There are 107 sheep in England to every 1,000 population, whereas in Greece the proportion is 188, and in Spain 186 to every hundred inhabitants. Yet, owing to what may be called skillful and persistent cultivation, the English mutton is of far higher quality. In Switzerland, whatever the number of goats, there are only 17 sheep to every 100 inhabitants. To us, early potatoes come in the closing days of April, from "the stillyeard Bermoothes," and, about the same time England has an advance supply from Malta and Portugal, but higher prices for better produce are obtained by English market gardeners and American farmers in June. About one-sixth of the whole working population of England is agricultural, but neither the extent of land tilled, nor of labor expended, is able to meet the supply of food to Great Britain. Hence, the increased consumption of imported American produce—beef, pork, flour, cheese, rice, wheat, &c.—and the demand for Australian meat, the sum of $5,400,000 having been paid in 1872 for preserved provisions, the use of which has become very general. Wherever or however the supply of foreign food to England may increase or diminish, John Bull looks with confidence to America for "the staff of life," and, as yet, thanks to the fertility of our soil and the excellence of its culture, this reliance has never yet failed.

Crop Prospects.

The crop prospects of the Great West are reported to be unusually good. Present appearances indicate that the deficiency in the wheat crop of California will be fully made up by the increased yield of the Mississippi Valley. The New York Shipping List of the 7th inst says: "Our Western exchanges give very encouraging accounts of the present appearance of the winter wheat crop. It is almost unanimously declared that there was an increased area sown to wheat last fall; that it was put into the ground early, and mostly with the drill, and that the prospect for a large and successful harvest is exceedingly good. The late rains have brought it out wonderfully, and many farmers who thought their crop would be an entire failure find that they are going to do remarkably well. Here and there a field may be lost, and spots are killed out in other fields; but, upon the whole, the prospect is unusually good. Spring seeding has been retarded by the backwardness of the season, but with the great multiplicity of implements for facilitating farm work, we have no doubt a fair average of spring wheat will be sown; and some of the best harvests we have had were in backward seasons."

Home Produce Market.

WHEAT—The week which we have especially under review has been one of considerable excitement, but no very great fluctuations in the prices have occurred At the beginning $1 60 ₩ cental was freely offered, and buyers found that there could be a large supply had at that price. So after securing sufficient to supply their immediate wants, and under advices from San Francisco, they reduced their offers first to $1 57½ and then to $1 55, at which it is now firm. The receipts are gradually falling, being for the present week one-fourth less than last.

FLOUR—The market is hardly in such full supply as at our last report, though all demand can be readily met. The predictions of an advance in rate will probably fail of fulfillment, as the price of Wheat has again receded. Trade is fair and dealers are firmly holding at $5 ₩ bbl for No 1 brands, $4 25@4 75 for good country brands, $4 for fine, and $3 75 for Superfine. The Parisian has received about 600 tons of her cargo for China, and we are informed that the remainder will be forthcoming as rapidly as the vessel is ready for it.

OATS—Trade is not active, as horsemen fear the epizooty, when the grain becomes useless for feed, and farmers have about finished seeding, and require no more for that purpose The receipts have been less than half the quantity last week. Jobbers here decline to pay more than 55c ₩ bushel, sacks included.

BARLEY—Quotations are nominally furnished at $1 40 @1 50 ₩ cwt. We hear of no transactions. Small lots would be freely taken at current rates.

HAY—Good timothy has been sold on the wharf at $15 ₩ ton, though a slight advance might be obtained for best quality.

FEED—During the week some decline has been noted. The supply is fair and quotations are weaker at $30 ₩ ton for shorts, middlings, etc., and $20 for bran, as jobbers paying rates.

POTATOES—Small lots of 95c@$1 ₩ bu, and the market is well supplied with last year's crop at a very low figure, some, though of inferior variety, selling at 15c ₩ bushel Best of old at 35c

ONIONS—Of the last year's crop the supply is limited to a few small lots, for which the nominal quotations are 4@5c ₩ lb.

APPLES—But few in the market and prices have undergone no change for the week, the season being about closed

DRIED FRUIT—We quote dried apples in sacks at 5@6½c ₩ lb, and in new kegs at 7@7½c. Prunes, Plums are in supply at 10@15c ₩ lb.

BACON—During the week so far the receipts have been nearly up to average, and prices have been steadily maintained at 14@14½c ₩ lb for sides, 8@9c for shoulders, and 14@15c for hams, with an advance for fancy cut and established brands

LARD—The supply of Oregon-made is full and prices weak, 11c ₩ lb in kegs, and 12@12½c in tins

BUTTER—We note large receipts almost daily, and except for the very best fresh dairy for table use, prices are low and weak Choice lots of roll are offering at 17@20c ₩ lb, while common, in kegs, boxes, barrels, etc., vary from 10 to 15c.

EGGS—Jobbers are still offering only 16c ₩ dozen, and securing large lots at that figure

CHICKENS—There are only small lots in the market, and prices are unchanged since last report.

HIDES—The demand is less active, and prices, though unchanged, are weaker at 7c for Green and 14@15c for dry.

WOOL—The spring clip is coming to hand slowly, but little good shearing weather having yet been enjoyed. There are but few buyers in this market now, and these offer only 20c ₩ lb at which we give no advice to holders to sell, though the future of the market is uncertain
